APPENDIX A:

Kappa Epsilon Psi Military Sorority, Inc., and the NAACP agree upon the following partnership principles:

- Members are the core of our power: Our members are represented within various key communities (New American majority, seniors, union households, various employment sectors, etc.) and should be fully engaged to ensure they are an active part of the strategic partnerships we engage in at various levels. This point also recognizes that our campaigns' partnerships cannot be one-dimensional or rooted in one section of the progressive movement. Here targeted pluralism in service of a comprehensive shared agenda is essential.

- Collective power is transformational power: The path to power must include a broad base of progressive communities that have the depth and strength to elect champions, win issue fights and sustain our shared agenda. This is rooted in the notion of having mutual beneficial and democratic relationships that are driven to make real change happen collectively, which is essential to reaching scalable independent power (IP).

- Long-term investments are essential: Strategic partnerships require a deep level of coordination and long-term collaboration. This means that at times we are growing the work, we are doing in partnership with an organization and at times growing the capacity of a partner. There may be instances where a partnership is time bound, but most should be seen as long-term investment vehicles.
• Resource optimization is ideal: The goal is to optimize collective resources and capacities towards a shared agenda. This will require at times helping the partner to build its' own sustainability program to ensure its viability as a partner and as an independent organization. This requires a level of transparency and accountability that is applied evenly to all partners.

• Transformative relationships are key: While we may need to have some campaign-based and vendor relationships with organizations for short-term work, the goal of the partnership is to develop and strengthen long-term relationships with like-minded organizations. These relationships must span our work on multiple issues that drive a shared understanding and a consensus that economic and racial inequality is the central issue holding back our communities.

• Strengthening Core Capacities: Our work should lead us to developing the capacities needed on the ground to advance our agenda through successful electoral and issue campaigns. Winning in those areas, necessitates that we strengthen the capacities needed to win.

• Moving a shared agenda is required: Our partnerships must be rooted in the notion that we are moving a shared agenda in service of racial justice. This requires the partnership to explore and agree to a mission, vision and purpose that is connected to electing champions, winning issue fights and/or sustaining our previous gains.

Kappa Epsilon Psi Military Sorority, Inc., and the NAACP agree that the following shared core capacities will direct our ability to drive campaigns, engage in elections and generate a measurable level of influential power.
